

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

A GENERAL
DICTIONARY
OF THE
ENGLISH LANGUAGE;

TO WHICH IS PREFIXED,
A COMPREHENSIVE GRAMMAR.

NEW STANDARD FRENCH AND ENGLISH
PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY.

This Dictionary, for beauty of Paper, elegance of Printing, correctness and cheapness, stands unrivalled and unmatched.

P R E F A C E.

POCKET Dictionaries are best calculated for general purposes. Much useful matter is contained in a small space, and offered to the public at a low price. Indeed the cheapness of some is mentioned as a principal recommendation, while the quality of the paper, and the neatness of the print are the chief characteristics of others. And we cannot but remark, that there are Editors who have tortured their brains in order to confine the definition of words within the exact space allotted for a line.

This fantastic arrangement, noticed to the public as a beauty and advantage, appears to the judicious as a blemish and imperfection. For while the eye is strained and fatigued in its occasional researches, for want of the accidental blank spaces that are constantly met with in printing, the understanding is frequently misled by insignificant, puerile, or erroneous definitions. Candour, however, obliges us to confess, that these defects must have originated not from want of judgment, but from a depraved taste, an uncommon propensity to outré novelty.

The Author of the present Pocket Dictionary has carefully avoided these errors.—Where the definitions, however, could be comprised within a single line, so as to give to each word its various acceptations, he has adopted this mode, compression being a principal object;—but it may be necessary here to observe, that the various meanings of many words occupy two, three, and sometimes four lines, whenever particular information rendered it indispensably necessary.

Though a judicious compression in the several definitions has never been lost sight of, in order to render this Dictionary facilely portable;—yet that we might give it an advantage over our competitors for public approbation, we have selected upwards of two thousand words, used by our best classic writers, more than are to be found in any Pocket Dictionary extant; and the signification of a considerable number given in all other Dictionaries by circumlocution, are here explained by synonyma with the utmost perspicuity and precision.

We have also prefixed a comprehensive English Grammar, in which the author flatters himself the principles of the language are fully and explicitly handled. And with all due deference we hope it may be added,—that, independent of the superiour advantages above mentioned,—if quality of paper, neatness of type, and elegance of printing, in which it stands unequalled, be powerful recommendations to public patronage, the author and proprietors hope this general repository of the English language, will ensure them that success which modest merit and a desire to please have ever met with from a liberal and discerning public.

GRAMMAR

OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

GRAMMAR is the art of expressing our ideas according to certain established rules: it is divided into four parts; Orthography, Etymology, Prosody, and Syntax.

Orthography teaches how words ought to be written, the true pronunciation of which is called orthoepey.

Etymology teaches the true derivation of a word from its primitive or original.

Prosody teaches the quantity and accent of syllables: and Syntax the due construction of words into sentences.

PART I.

OF ORTHOGRAPHY, OR TRUE SPELLING.

ORTHOGRAPHY is the art or practice of spelling words whereby we express our thoughts in writing; for which purpose certain letters or characters have been formed, denoting distinct or inarticulate sounds; and the complete set of letters in any language is called the Alphabet, which in the English tongue contains twenty-six, whose names and powers are as follow:

THE ALPHABET.

Roman Characters.

A B C D E F G H I J K L M N O P Q R S T U V W X Y Z
a b c d e f g h i j k l m n o p q r s t u v w x y z

Italic Characters.

A B C D E F G H I J K L M N O P Q R S T U V W X Y Z
a b c d e f g h i j k l m n o p q r s t u v w x y z

The Names of the Letters.

ay, bee, cee, dee, e (ee), eff, jee, hee or aitch, i (eye), jay, kay, ell, em, en, o, pee, coo, ar, els, tee, you, vee, ou, ex, ye, zed.

Vowels.

A E I O U W Y	A E I O U W Y
a e i o u w y	a e i o u w y

OF VOWELS.

A vowel is, a letter which can be sounded fully and distinctly by itself, whereof there are seven in the English language, viz. a, e, i, o, u, w, and y, for the various sounds of which the reader is requested to refer to the Key to the Second Part of the Author's New French and English Pronouncing Dictionary.

OF DOUBLE VOWELS, DIPHTHONGS, AND TRIPHTHONGS.

A diphthong is the meeting of two vowels in one syllable; and a triphthong is the junction of three. If the sound of one of the vowels only be heard, the diphthong or triphthong is called improper; but, in either,—if the vowels composing them make a distinct articulation, composed of two different quantities, such diphthong or triphthong is then termed a proper one.

A GRAMMAR OF THE

There are twenty-five diphthongs, viz. ai, au, eu, au, ay, ei, ee, ei, eo, eu, ey, ie, ia, ee, ih, ee, ou, ou, ey, ua, ue, ui, uo, and uy; and nine triphthongs, eai, eie, iei, ieu, uai, uia, uei, uie, uoy,—the various sounds and qualities of which, as well as of the consonants, are accurately analyzed and pointed out in my "New French and English Pronouncing Dictionary."

OF THE CONSONANTS.

A Consonant is a letter that cannot be sounded, or but imperfectly sounded, without the aid of a vowel; as b, whose sound is be by annexing the vowel e.

The following consonants are called mutæ, b, c, d, g, k, l, and q; fr-b is termed fricative; t, s, and z, sibilant; and l, m, n, and r, liquids; which consonants are again subdivided into labial, dental, palatine, and nasal.

OF THE VARIOUS SOUNDS OR POWERS OF THE CONSONANTS.

B has one invariable sound. It is the soft articulation of f, being pronounced less forcibly.

C sounds hard like k before a, o, u, l, and r,—and soft before e, i, and y, or an aperture.

Ch have three different sounds;—1st. like sch, as in church, crush, &c.;—2dly like sh in words derived from the French; as châf, châlîer; and 3dly like k in words derived from the Greek; as choro, chryst, archangel.

D has but one uniform sound; as in draw, dwell.

F (the hard sound of v) has also one invariable sound.

G has always the hard sound before a, o, u, l, r, and at the end of words unless followed by d or e; and is sometimes ka d, sometimes sest, before e, i, and y.

G before n is mute, but gives the preceding vowel the long sound, as in son, condign. It is sounded, by the best orators, at the end of words, as loving, speaking, writing, &c.

Gh at the end of some words sound like g; as in enough, laugh, tough, rough, enough, trough: In most other words gh are silent, and give the preceding vowel the long sound; as alibough, high, thigh.

Ph always sound like f, except in phthisic, phthisical, phthisis, phthises, in which words they are silent.

H, according to the definition of most grammarians, is neither a consonant nor a vowel. It is, however, a consonant, and does the office of one by giving form to a succeeding vowel. Its power is shewn by a strong emission of the breath, as in the following words; hand, horse, &c.: nevertheless, this consonant is sometimes mute in the beginning, middle, and end of words; as in hence, rhetoric, Messiah.

J is sounded like g soft.

K has the hard sound of c, and is never doubled.

L is doubled at the end of monosyllables; as in hill, kill, still, fall, ball; but in compound words one of the l's is suppressed, as in listful. It is mute in some words, as in call, half, could, would, should, balk, tall, walk, &c.

M has but one uniform sound.

N has always the same sound. It is mute after an m at the end of a word; as damn, hymn, concern, contain.

P has one invariable sound.

Q, always followed by u, sounds like k; as in conquer, liquor, &c.

R, at the end of words derived from the French, are pronounced like er; as in theatre, metre, sepulchre, &c.

S has a hard and a soft sound. Its natural one, the hard, is hissing or sibilant, as in flour; its soft is like z, as in he's, seas, &c.

S retains the soft sound in the syllable son, if a vowel precede it, as in conson, elison, &c.; but preserves the hissing sound, when preceded by a consonant; as in conversion, diversion, &c. Before e mute it sounds like z, as in devise, revise; and also before y at the end of words, as in busy, daisy, &c. But, note, s always retain the hard or hissing sound.

V is the soft sound, or, rather, power of f.

W is sometimes a vowel, and sometimes a consonant. It is a consonant in these words, wal, walf, &c. otherwise they would be pronounced col, co's, which pronunciation every one must allow is improper.—It is a vowel in the words nru, blew, and sounds like u long.—As a corroborating proof that w is a consonant, and that its power or sound is not that of oo, (as Mr. Sheridan contends) we need only instance the word one, which is pronounced by every Englishman as if written won. The articulation of w consonant requires a contact of the lips, and a quicker and more forcible emission of the breath than o, its pretended power, does,—in the same proportion as b aspirated is to b mute.

X has two sounds, sharp and flat: sharp like ks, as in extremes; and flat like gz, as in exile. Note, its power is z at the beginning of words.

Y, (the best name for which would be ye) is likewise sometimes a vowel, and sometimes a consonant. It is a consonant in the beginning of words, as in yes, yet, yeft, year, yare, &c.; and a vowel in the middle or at the end of words.—Even the vowels i and e frequently take the sound of y consonant; as in the words judicial, righteous, &c. &c. which are pronounced as if written joi-ti-ur, ri-gh-ti-us.

Z has but one sound, which is nearly that of ds.

OF SYLLABLES.

By a Syllable is meant a single articulation, or as much of a word as can be uttered by one impulse of the voice. Syllables, in speaking, are found as words are formed; and in writing they are parts of the same word, composed of characters which represent those sounds: for instance, the word syllable itself (sy-la-ble) has three parts, three sounds, and three syllables.

A GENERAL RULE FOR THE DIVISION OF SYLLABLES.

1. A consonant between two vowels, must be joined to the former to make the first syllable; as, bal-ance, cu-i-dent, ac-cip-i-ent.
2. A double consonant must be divided, as d'n-ner, sup-per, &c.
3. When two vowels come together, both distinctly sounded, they must be separated in spelling; as co-equal, mu-tu-al, &c.
4. Grammatical terminations, or endings, must be separated in spelling; as low-ed, walk-e-ly, mov-ing, per-se-ver-ance.
5. Consonants not proper to begin a word must be divided; as log-man, il-lu-sion, lock-ram.
6. Consonants, which may begin a word, are to be divided, whenever their separation conveys the sound of each syllable of the word the nearest to true orthoepy; as rep-ro-hate, ret-ro-grade, sec-re-ta-ry.
7. * All compounds and derivatives, generally speaking, must be divided into their single or primitive words, as mor-al, mor-al-i-ty, guilt, guilt-i-ness, guil-ty.
8. The endings, -cial, -tia, -ci-us, -tious; -seus, -sion, &c. &c. sounded sh-ah, sh-ur, sh-un, &c. are never to be separated, as they form but one syllable.

PART II.

OF ETYMOLOGY.

ETYMOLOGY teaches the true derivation of a word from its original—shews the parts of speech—the inflections of nouns, and the various applications by which the sense of the word is diversified.

A primitive word is a word undervived from any other language.

A derivative word is that which comes from some other in the same language, or from one in another language.

A simple word is that which is not mixed or compounded.

A compound word is one that is made up of two or more words.

There are five sorts of derivations among words purely English: 1st, derivatives from substantives; as nightly from night;—2^{dly}, substantives from adjectives; as nicene from nice; delic-tious from delicate; muddling from muddle;—3^{dly}, adverbs from adjectives by the addition of ly; as virtually from virtuous;—4^{thly}, verbs from adjectives; as to pur-sue from per-suade;—5^{thly}, participles from verbs, by adding -ing.

* This rule is liable to exception: for example, if moral (from moral) be divided mor-al-ity, instead of mor-al-i-ty, it agrees best with the standard pronunciation.

A GRAMMAR OF THE

ing or ed, or ne and d only if the verb end in e; as, walking, walked, from to walk; and placing, placed, from to place.

OF WORDS.

Words are divided into classes and called parts of speech, of which there are ten different kinds, viz. Article, Noun, Adjective, Pronoun, Verb, Participle, Adverb, Conjunction, Preposition, Interjection.

1. The article is a word prefixed to substantives to point out their signification.
2. A noun or substantive, is the name of any person, place, or thing.
3. An adjective is a word that denotes some quality or accident belonging to the substantive.
4. A pronoun is put in the place of a noun, to point out some person or thing.
5. A verb expresses action, being, or suffering.
6. A participle is a part of speech which partakes both of the nature of a verb and an adjective.
7. An adverb is joined to a verb to denote the circumstance of a quality or action.
8. A conjunction joins words and sentences together.
9. A preposition is put before nouns and pronouns to express the relation or connection between different words.
10. An interjection expresses some sudden emotion of the mind.

OF THE ARTICLE.

The Article is a word prefixed to substantives to limit or extend their signification.

There are three articles, a, an, and the; the two first are called indefinite articles, and the latter the definite.

*A and an, indefinite articles, used before substantives of the singular number only, leave the sense of the word to which they are prefixed, in a vague or undetermined sense; as, a house, means any house or one house; an index, means one index, or any index: but note, an is used before such nouns only of the singular as begin with a vowel or h mute; as an hour.

The†, the definite article, used both in the singular and plural number, points out the particular person, place or thing spoken of; as, "the rule I gave you is invariable,"—that is, that particular rule. When substantives are without any article, they are to be taken in their widest, or most unlimited sense; as, "man is mortal,"—that is,—all mankind are mortal.

OF THE SUBSTANTIVE NOUN.

A Noun or Substantive is the name of any person, place, thing, or abstract quality; as William, London, a book, virtue.

Substantives ‡ are of two sorts, proper and common names.

Common names (called, also, appellative) are such as express a whole kind, as, man, animal, bird, fish.

Proper names express a particular person, place or thing, so as to distinguish them from all others; as William, London.

OF NUMBER.

By Number we mean the distinction of one from many.

A noun has two numbers, the singular and plural.

The singular number expresses one person or thing; as a book, a house; or a number collectively taken; as, a committee, an army.

The plural expresses more than one, as books, houses. It is generally formed from the singular by the addition of s.

* The indefinite article a is joined to the adjectives few, many; to the latter with great before it;—and also to the words dozen, score, groce, &c.; as a few men; a great many men; I have seen many a tall man; a score of sheep, a groce of buttons, &c. &c.

† The definite article, the, is sometimes applied to adverbs, and to adjectives of the comparative and superlative degrees, in order to render them the more nervous and precise; as the more danger, the more honour; this is the least of all.

‡ All nouns to which one cannot add the word thing, with propriety, are substantives;—and those to which thing may be added are adjectives.

ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

Nouns ending in ch, sh, ss, or x, form their plural by adding es; as churches, blush, blushes; kiss, kisses; box, boxes. Those in f or *fe are changed into ves; as calves, calves; hairs, hairs; knives, knives; leaves, leaves; loaves, loaves; sheaves, sheaves; shelves, shelves; selves, selves; thieves, thieves; wives, wives; wolves, wolves.

Nouns ending in y, preceded by a consonant, form their plural by changing y into ies; as glory, glories, &c.—But when y is preceded by a vowel, the plural is formed according to the general rule; as joy, joys; delay, delays; attorney, attorneys; kidney, kidneys; not attornies, and kidnies, as many erroneously write.

THE FOLLOWING NOUNS FORM THEIR PLURAL IRREGULARLY.

Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.
Brother,	Brethren,	Die	Dice	Louse	Lice	Penny	Pence
or Brothers		Foot	Feet	Mouse	Mice	Tooth	Teeth
Child,	Children	Goose	Geese	Man	Men	Woman	Women

OF GENDER.

Gender, which is the distinction of sexes, is of three kinds; masculine, feminine, and neuter.

Nouns which relate to males, are of the masculine gender; as man, boy, bull.

Those which signify females, are of the feminine; as woman, girl, cow; and

Such as express things without life, are neuter; that is, of neither masculine nor feminine gender; as pen, paper, desk.

OF CASES.

Cases are the variations or endings of nouns, serving to express the different relations they bear to each other, and to the things which they represent.

English substantives have properly but two cases; but reasons are subjoined in a note below for adding or supposing a third; and these three cases are called the nominative, possessive, and objective.

The nominative expresses simply the name of a person, place, or thing, and is put before a verb, in a simple affirmation; as, man, London, virtue, he is; but when a question is asked, the nominative is placed after the verb; as, is he?

The possessive denotes property or belonging to; as man's glory; which may also be expressed by a circumlocution, with the preposition of; as "the glory of man."

The objective is placed after verbs, shewing that the action of the agent or nominative, placed before the verb, passes to the noun or word after it, as its object; as, I esteem Thomas †.

EXAMPLES OF NOUNS DECLINED ACCORDING TO GENDER, NUMBER, CASE, AND ARTICLE.

	Singular.	Plural.
Male.	Nomin. Man, a man, the man Possess. Man's, a man's †, the man's Object. Man, a man, the man	Nomin. Men, men, the men Possess. Men's, † men's, the men's Object. Men, men, the men
Feminine.	Nomin. A queen, the queen Possess. A queen's †, the queen's Object. A queen, the queen	Nomin. Queens, the queens Possess. Queens' †, the queens' Object. Queens, the queens
	Nomin. Liberty Possess. Liberty's † Object. Liberty	Nomin. Liberties, or the liberties Possess. Of liberties', or, of the liberties Object. Liberties, or the liberties

* Except "hoof, roof, chief, dwarf, grief, handkerchief, relief, scarf, wharf, reproach, scoff, strife," and others in ff, which form their plural by the addition of s.

† With propriety may the objective case (answering to the accusative in Latin) be allowed, if we attend to the above sentence; for instead of "I esteem Thomas," let us supply its place with the personal pronoun, and then the phrase will be "I esteem him," where him is in the objective case, as may be seen by the declension of pronouns.

‡ Or by a circumlocution with the preposition of; as of a man, of the man; of men, of the men;—of a queen, of the queen;—of queens, of the queens.

1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem or issue that needs to be addressed. This involves gathering information and understanding the context of the problem.

2. Once the problem is identified, the next step is to define the objectives and goals of the project. This helps to clarify what needs to be achieved and provides a clear direction for the team.

3. The third step is to develop a plan or strategy to address the problem. This involves breaking down the problem into smaller, manageable tasks and determining the resources needed to complete each task.

4. The fourth step is to implement the plan. This involves putting the strategy into action and monitoring progress to ensure that the project is on track.

5. The final step is to evaluate the results of the project. This involves assessing the outcomes against the objectives and goals and identifying any areas for improvement.

OF THE COMPARISON OF ADJECTIVES.

Adjectives have three * states or degrees † of comparison; the positive, the comparative, and the superlative.

The positive simply expresses the quality; as, this paper is white.

The comparative enlarges or decreases the quality of the thing; as, this paper is whiter than that.

The superlative expresses its quality in the highest possible degree; as, this paper is the whitest of all.

OF THE FORMATION OF THE DEGREES OF COMPARISON.

The comparative is formed from the positive by adding er; the superlative by adding est; except when the word ends in e,—for in this case r only is to be added for the comparative, and st for the superlative; as,

Ex. 1.	Pos.	Comp.	Superl.		Pos.	Comp.	Super.
	long	longer	longest		wise	wiser	wisest
	thick	thicker	thickest		polite	politer	politest

The above rule holds good for words of two syllables, whose accent is on the last, and some few, as able, noble, &c. accented on the first syllable:—but words of more than two syllables, and those of two which end in ly, form the comparative and superlative by prefixing more and most to the positive; as, excellent, more excellent, most excellent; frugal, more frugal, most frugal, &c.

The superlative is formed in a few adjectives, by adding the adverbs more and most, to the end of them; as, foremost, nearest, undermost, uttermost, uppermost, or utmost.

The following are irregularly formed in most languages:

Pos.	Comp.	Sup.	Pos.	Comp.	Sup.
Good	better	best	Little	less	least
bad, ill, evil	worse	worst	Much or many	more	most

Note. Double comparatives and superlatives are grammatical errors, and should not be used; such as, more braver, worser, the most worst, &c. There are advocates, however, in support of this inaccuracy, who contend, that most high, which occurs in the Psalms, is rather a beauty than a blemish in the language, as being a distinguishing compliment justly due to the Almighty.

OF THE PRONOUN.

A Pronoun is a word put instead of a noun.

Pronouns have persons, numbers, genders, and cases. They are divided into six kinds, viz. Personal or Substantive, Relative, Demonstrative, Interrogative, Indefinite, and Adjective.

The personal or substantive pronouns are the five following; I, thou, he, she, it.

I, which is of the first person, is used when one speaks of himself; thou, the second, when he speaks to another; he, she, or it, (all of the third) when an absent man, woman, or thing is spoken of; the plural of which are we, ye, they.

Relative pronouns are four in number; who, which, what, that. Who, used in speaking of persons, is both masculine and feminine: we make use of which, in speaking of things; it is therefore neuter.

That, applied to things only, includes both the relative and the antecedent; that is used by many writers, equally to persons and things.

Demonstrative pronouns are two in number; this, that. We make use of the word this in speaking of, or referring to, the person or thing that is near us—its plural is these; and of that, when speaking to such as are at a distance,

* Some few adjectives are used only in the positive state or degree; as, living, dead, &c.

† Certain critics in philology deny the existence of three degrees of comparison, though they admit, at the same time, of three states. In support of this, they say king is the positive state of the adjective. We admit this, and then ask whether king and longest are not the comparative and superlative states.—Thus, by changing terms, they will be found to have three degrees of comparison.

A GRAMMAR OF THE

Some nouns are used only in the singular number; as, har'ey, wheat, lea-ning, pride, gold, silver. Others are the same in the singular and plural; as, deer, fern, swine, sheep.

Some in the plural only; as, annals, Alps, arms, apes, bellows, bowels, brackets, cresses, dregs, goods, entrails, ices, lungs, scissors, shears, snuffers, thanks, wages, news.

The names of cities, countries, rivers, mountains; the names of virtues and vices; the names of herbs, (excepting nettle, poppy, lily, colwort, cabbage, &c.) bread, wine, beer, &c. honey, oil, milk, butter, want the plural: but when some of these stand for individuals, or several sorts, they then admit of a plural; as, wines, oils.

OF THE ADJECTIVE.

An * Adjective is a word which denotes some quality or accident belonging to the substantive; as, a new book; a large house.

Adjectives are never varied on account of number, gender, or case; the only variation they are subject to is—that of degrees of comparison.

* In order to know whether a word be an adjective or a substantive, add the word thing to it: if it make good sense it is an adjective; if nonsense, the word is a substantive.

ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

OF THE COMPARISON OF ADJECTIVES.

Adjectives have three * states or degrees † of comparison; the positive, the comparative, and the superlative.

The positive simply expresses the quality; as, this paper is white.

The comparative enlarges or decreases the quality of the thing; as, this paper is whiter than that.

The superlative expresses its quality in the highest possible degree; as, this paper is the whitest of all.

OF THE FORMATION OF THE DEGREES OF COMPARISON.

The comparative is formed from the positive by adding er; the superlative by adding est; except when the word ends in e,—for in this case r only is to be added for the comparative, and st for the superlative; as,

	Pos.	Comp.	Superl.		Pos.	Comp.	Super.
a	long	longer	longest	a	wile	wiser	wisest
ai	thick	thicker	thickest	ai	polite	politer	politest

The above rule holds good for words of two syllables, whose accent is on the last, and some few, as able, noble, &c. accented on the first syllable:—but words of more than two syllables, and those of two which end in ly, form the comparative and superlative by prefixing more and most to the positive; as, excellent, more excellent; modest, more modest; frugal, more frugal, &c.

The superlative is formed in a few adjectives, by adding the adverbs more and most, to the end of them; as, foremost, nearest, undermost, uttermost, uppermost, or utmost.

The following are irregularly formed in most languages:

Pos.	Comp.	Sup.	Pos.	Comp.	Sup.
Good	better	best	Little	less	least
bad, ill, evil	worse	worst	Much or many	more	most

Note. Double comparatives and superlatives are grammatical errors, and should not be used; such as, more braver, worser, the most worst, &c. There are advocates, however, in support of this inaccuracy, who contend, that most high, which occurs in the Psalms, is rather a beauty than a blemish in the language, as being a distinguishing compliment; it is due to the Almighty.

OF THE PRONOUN.

A Pronoun is a word put instead of a noun.

Pronouns have persons, numbers, genders, and cases. They are divided into six kinds, viz. Personal or Substantive, Relative, Demonstrative, Interrogative, Indefinite, and Adjective.

The personal or substantive pronouns are the five following; I, thou, he, she, it.

I, which is of the first person, is used when one speaks of himself; thou, the second, when he speaks to another; he, she, or it, (all of the third) when an absent man, woman, or thing is spoken of; the plural of which are we, ye, they.

Relative pronouns are four in number; who, which, what, that. Who, used in speaking of persons, is both masculine and feminine: we make use of which, in speaking of things; it is therefore neuter.

What, applied to things only, includes both the relative and the antecedent; that is used by many writers, equally to persons and things.

Demonstrative pronouns are two in number; this, that. We make use of the word this in speaking of, or referring to, the person or thing that is near us—its plural is these; and of that, when speaking of such as are at a distance,

* Some few adjectives are used only in the positive state or degree; as, living, dead, &c.

† Certain critics in philology deny the existence of three degrees of comparison, though they admit, at the same time, of three cases. In support of this, they say king is the positive state of the adjective. We admit this, and then ask whether longer and longest are not the comparative and superlative states.—Thus, by changing terms, they will be found to have three degrees of comparison.

A GRAMMAR OF THE

Some nouns are used only in the singular number ; as, har'ey, wheat, learning, pride, gold, silver. Others are the same in the singular and plural ; as, deer, fern, swine, sheep.

Some in the plural only ; as, annals, Alps, arms, ashes, bellows, bowels, breeches, creases, dregs, goods, entrails, ices, lungs, scissors, shears, snuffers, thanks, wages, news.

OF THE PRONOUN.

Pronouns have persons, numbers, genders, and cases. They are divided into six kinds, viz. Personal or Substantive, Relative, Demonstrative, Interrogative, Indefinite, and Adjective.

The personal or substantive pronouns are the five following; I, thou, he, she, it. I, which is of the first person, is used when one speaks of himself; thou, the second, when he speaks to another; he, she, or it, (all of the third) when an absent man, woman, or thing is spoken of; the plural of which are we, ye, they.

the plural of which is they; as, this is the man; these are the books; that is the dog; those are the men.

Interrogative pronouns used, as their name imports, in asking questions, are three; who, which, what.

Indefinite pronouns express nothing distinct and determined; they are eight in number, some, any, whenever, *on, *either, where†, whenever‡, what§.

The adjective pronouns are this, me, his, her, its, our, your, their, which are always followed by a noun substantive.

One and self (in the plural themselves) are annexed to the above adjective pronouns, to mark their meaning more strongly; as, I did it my own self.

In a poetical style, inanimate things are personified, and, of course, accompanied with the masculine or feminine pronouns he or she, his or hers—as,

“ Soon as the light of dawning science spread

“ Her orient rays, and wak'd the mutes' long, &c.”

Personal pronouns have three cases, the Nominative, Possessive, and Objective. The nominative comes before the verb; as, I speak; the possessive signifies belonging; as, my house is that; 'Tis mine. The objective is governed by active verbs, and prepositions; as, I taught him; I arrived before him.

NOTE.—In grammatical construction all nouns and pronouns, generally speaking, are of the third person; except th, when an address is made to any one, thou in this case the noun is of the second person; and my, such pronouns as have the yo, and you periphr.

OF THE VERB.

A Verb expresses action, being, or suffering; as, I write, I am, I endure hardships.

Verbs are of four kinds; Substantive, Active, Passive, and Noun.

A Substantive verb expresses being or existing; as, I am.

A verb Active called also transitive, expresses an action, which implies an agent who acts, and an object acted upon; as, “ I believe Thomas.” In this sentence the pronoun he is the agent, glorify the verb, and Thomas the object acted upon.

A passive verb expresses suffering or enduring an action, and also implies an agent and an object acted upon, like the verb Active, but with this difference,

* The reflexive of we, is ourselves; of others, others; the nominative plural of which is we, and possessive ours.

† The three indefinite pronouns, some, any, and both, may easily be distinguished from most of pronouns, as there will be no antecedent in the sentence in which they are used, and no form interrogative pronouns, as who, which, &c.

‡ The use of an evident impropriety of language is pointed in the English; as, “ He as saying in Denmark.”

ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

difference,—that the object of a verb passive takes the lead in the sentence; as, Thomas is esteemed by me.

A neuter verb expresses an action which either reverts to the agent, or which has no particular object implied; as, I dream, he runs, they walk.

Verbs have Times or Tenses, Numbers, Persons, Modes, and Participles.

OF TIMES OR TENSES.

Though English verbs, of themselves, have but two times, the present and past (indefinite), as, love, loved,—and though there be only three general distinctions of time, present, past, and future, (the latter formed by the assistance of the auxiliary shall or will); yet in transitive and passive verbs, to express an act on more definitively, Grammarians make use of nine tenses or times; which are 1st, the present indefinite; 2dly, the present imperfect; 3d, the present perfect; 4th, the past indefinite; 5th, the past imperfect; 6th, the past perfect; 7th, the future indefinite; 8th, the future imperfect; and 9th, the future perfect; and these times, except the present and past indefinite, are formed by the assistance of the auxiliary verbs, am, be, can, do, have, may, could, would, should, might, did, shall, and will.

OF NUMBER.

There are two numbers, the singular and plural.

OF PERSONS.

There are three persons in each mode; 1st, 2d, and 3d.

OF MODE.

There are four modes; the Indicative, Imperative, Conjunctive, and Infinitive. The indicative affirms or declares, as, I teach; or ask a question, as, Is he come?

The imperative commands or exhorts; as, Do that; pray come hither.

The conjunctive expresses a doubt, condition, or contingency; as, I could do it, if he were willing.

The infinitive merely expresses the action, without any regard to time, number, or person; as, To write well is commendable.

OF THE PARTICIPLE.

There are two participles derived from a verb, the present and past; the former is called the Active, and the latter the Passive participle.

* Written by contraction and general consent, couldst, shouldst, wouldst, in which words the s is not sounded.

A GRAMMAR OF THE

The present participle is formed of the verb, by adding ing, if the verb end with a consonant; as, present, presenting;—or by annexing ng only, if it end in e, as, love, loving;—and the past participle is made by adding ed or d only, according to the former remark; as, present, presented; love, loved.

Participles which have no relation to time, are absolutely adjectives; as, a loving father, a beloved son.

Verbs of one syllable ending with a single consonant, preceded by a single vowel, and also those of two or more syllables, having the accent on the last syllable, double the final consonant of the verb in the present participle, and likewise in every other part of the verb in which a syllable is added; as, set, setting, setteth; best, besetting, besetteth.

A GRAMMAR OF THE OF IRREGULAR VERBS.

Irregular or anomalous verbs are such as do not form their past times and perfect participle, by the addition of d or ed to the verb.

Verbs ending in ch, ck, p, x, ll, ss, not only change ed into t, in the time active, and perfect participle, but also drop one of the double letters: dwelt, mist, past, snapt, for dwelled, mixed, passed, snapped. And those terminate in l, m, n, p, after a diphthong, shorten the diphthong, or change it into a single short vowel; as, deal, dealt; dream, dreamt; mean, meant; felt; sleep, slept, &c.—and others change the termination ve into f leave, left; bereave, bereft, &c.

OF THE ADVERB.

An * Adverb is joined to a verb to denote the circumstance of a quality or action. They admit of no variation whatever, except some few which have the degrees of comparison; as, well, better, best; often, oftener, oftenest; sooner, soonest.

The principal adverbs are those of order, time, place, quantity, quality, manner, affirmation, negation, doubting, interrogation, and comparison. Many are formed from adjectives, by adding ly; as, like, likely; sincere, sincerely; wise, wisely, &c.

OF THE CONJUNCTION.

A Conjunction, which is indeclinable, joins words and sentences together.

Conjunctions, however, have sometimes a government of modes. Some require the indicative, and some the conjunctive after them. If, though, unless, except, lest, whether, that,—when they express doubt, condition, &c. govern the conjunctive Mode;—but when they imply nothing contingent or uncertain, govern the indicative.

There are several kinds or classes of conjunctions; such as, adversative, causal, conclusive, conditional, copulative, comparative, disjunctive, dubitative, and conjunctive.

Some are used distributively or in pairs; as,

Whether, or: “Whether did you ride or walk?”

Neither, nor: “Neither your love nor hatred affects me.”

Either, or: “Either you or he shall do it.”

Enough, yet, or nevertheless: “Though you say it, yet I will not believe it.”

As, as: “As white as snow.”

So, as: “He is not so tall as you.”

So, that: “His rules are so dark that I cannot comprehend them.”

OF THE PREPOSITION:

Prepositions are put before nouns and pronouns to express the relation or connection between different words. They always govern the noun or pronoun in the objective case.

Prepositions are of two sorts, separable, and inseparable.

The separable are above, about, after, against, among, amongst, at, before, behind, beneath, below, between, betwixt, beyond, beside, by, concerning, for, from, in, into, out, out of, on, over, till, to, through, until, unto, upon, under, with, within, without.

The inseparable, or such as constitute parts of words, are; a, ab, abs, ad, ante, anti, ap, ap, be, circum, co, con, contra, counter, de, dis, e, ex, en, extra, extra, in, inter, intra, me, a, mis, over, out, for, for, op, per, post, pre, pro, pro, re, re, retro, sub, sub, super, super, syn, trans, un, up, and with.

* An adverb may be known from an adjective, by this rule: place a substantive after it, and it will make nonsense; but if you join an adverb to an adjective and a verb, it will make good sense.

A GRAMMAR OF THE

Prepositions frequently change their final consonant into the consonant, with which the word begins; as, commaterial for commaterial, &c. &c.

OF THE INTERJECTION.

An interjection expresses some sudden emotion of the mind; such as, joy, grief, wonder, praise, contempt, surprise, mirth, incitement to attention, desire of silence, languor, deliberation, pain, exultation, salutation, &c. &c.

Substantives and adjectives are not infrequently used for interjections; as, O shame! O sad!

PART III.

OF PROSODY.

Prosody comprises orthoepey, or a due pronunciation of words; and orthometry, or the art of composing verse.

OF DUE PRONUNCIATION.

By due pronunciation is meant that of giving every letter its proper sound and power, and every syllable its proper accent.

By accent is to be understood a stress of the voice laid on the proper syllable of a word, according to its quantity, long or short, without lengthening or shortening the syllable.

By quantity is meant the time in which a syllable is pronounced; and the proportion between a long and a short one, is as two to one: hence accent and quantity are two distinct things.

Of VOWELS constituting long and short Syllables, and of proper Accent.

The various long and short sounds of the vowels and diphthongs having been scrupulously analyzed, and accurately explained by a variety of examples, in the second part of my New French and English Pronouncing Dictionary, a repetition cannot be expected in this work, as orthoepey is not particularly insisted on; and as general rules for the right placing of the accent would tend rather to bewilder than assist the reader.—A good dictionary is the best instructor.

OF VERSIFICATION.

Versification, or the art or practice of making verse, is the harmonic arrangement of a certain number of syllables, according to laws and maxims established in that language, which consists of a due and pleasing variety of long and short, accented and unaccented syllables.

There are four kinds of metrical modulations in poetry; Iambi, Trochaic, Dactyle, and Anapaestic;—to which may be added another, called Alexandrine, consisting of twelve syllables, used to diversify heroic poetry.

The Iambic, which comprises verses of four, six, eight, and ten syllables, consists of a short and a long syllable, alternately.

The Trochaic consists of an alternate long and short syllable, and includes verses of three, five, and seven syllables.

The Anapaestic metre consists of two short, and one long syllable. In this measure a syllable is sometimes retrenched from the first foot.

As the space allotted for this work will not admit of our quoting examples of the different kinds of metre, we shall conclude this head by observing,—that our language, with respect to versification, is capable of much improvement. Poets take great licences by frequently making syllables short which are naturally long and emphatic, using at pleasure short for long, and long for short syllables.

By thus confounding accent and quantity, substituting strength in lieu of length, the harmony of the verse, which is by no means inconsistent with the rules of oratory, is either marred or rendered less pleasing. A due distinction in this respect, and the general adoption of a plurality of accents on words, would be a great measure free English verse from so glaring an absurdity.

PART IV.

OF SYNTAX.

Syntax teaches the due construction of words into sentences.

RULES OF SYNTAX.

RULE I. A verb must agree with its noun, pronoun, agent, or nominative, in number and person; as, "I teach, they learn; he plays, thou art idle; man is mortal."

OBSERVATIONS.

1. A collective noun, or noun of multitude, may have a verb either in the singular or plural number; as, "the committee is now sitting; the public are displeased."
2. Every verb, except it be in the infinitive mood, has an agent or nominative case, and every nominative case belongs to some verb, either expressed or understood.
3. The agent or nominative is found by asking the question, who is? who does? who suffers?
4. Sometimes a sentence, or a verb in the infinitive mode, stands for, or does the office of a substantive; as, "to walk is healthful."

RULE II. Pronominal and other adjectives must agree with their substantives in gender, number, and case; as, this book, these books.

OBSERVATIONS.

1. Adjectives are sometimes put substantively; as, the great, the wise, the learned,—that is, the great men, &c.
2. The adjective is usually placed before its substantive; as, a new book; the first man: but in poetical composition it is frequently, for the sake of euphony, placed after it; as, "the genuine cause of every deed divine."

RULE III. The relative must agree with its antecedent in gender, number, person, and case; as, "I esteem the man who respects me."

OBSERVATIONS.

1. Every relative refers to an antecedent noun expressed or understood, and agrees with it in person; as, "who steals my purse steals trash, &c.; that is, the man who, &c."
2. The relative is the nominative to the verb, when no other nominative comes between it and the verb; as, "the man who sings."
3. But when there is a noun between the relative and the verb, the relative must be put in that case which the verb, or the noun following, or the preposition going before it used to govern; as, "he is the man whom I esteem; he whose bounty relieved me; he to whom you spoke."
4. When the relative comes after two words of different persons, it may agree in person with either; as, "I am the man who command you; or, I am the man who commands you."
5. Notwithstanding, the person of the relative, or pronoun, is not to be changed, but continued the same throughout the sentence or subject, whether in prose or poetry; as, "God hath endued thee with wisdom to maintain thy dominion."
6. Note. The relative, by an ellipsis, is frequently but inelegantly omitted; as, "the book I read," for, the book which I read; "the man I esteem," for, the man whom I esteem.

RULE IV. A verb active or transitive governs the noun or pronoun following in the objective case; as, "John loves me, and I esteem him; Thomas beat William, that is, him."

RULE V. The substantive verb to be, governs the same case after it as before it; as, "Who is there? It is I; I am he."

OBSERVATION.

When this verb is in the infinitive mode, it governs the objective case; as, "I took it to be him."

RULE VI. Participles, of the present tense, govern the same case as their verbs; as, "love your enemies; for in loving them you fulfil the law."

A GRAMMAR, &c.

OBSERVATION.

The present participle, with the definite article the before it, becomes a substantive, and governs the preposition of after it; as, "the loving your enemies is the command of God."

RULE VII. When two verbs come together, which depend on each other, the latter is put in the infinitive mode with its sign to before it; as, "be love to play."

OBSERVATION.

The following verbs have others after them without the sign to;—bid, dare, feel, hear, let, make, must, need, see, and sometimes have, not used as auxiliary.

RULE VIII. The infinitive mode frequently performs the office of a substantive, as the agent of a verb; as, "to walk is healthful."

RULE IX. When two nouns come together, which appertain to each other, having the preposition of between them, the latter may be made the genitive case, and placed before the former; as, "the troops of the king, the king's troops."

OBSERVATIONS.

1. A substantive placed before another substantive becomes an adjective; as river-water, shell-fish.
2. But if two substantives come together which signify the same thing, they are both put in the same case; as, Queen Charlotte.

RULE X. Two or more nouns or pronouns of the singular number, connected together in a sentence, by a conjunction copulative, require the verbs, nouns, and pronouns in the plural number; as, "justice and mercy wait before God's throne; greatness and goodness are rarely companions; the king and the queen had put on their robes."

RULE XI. Two or more nouns or pronouns, of different persons, being joined in a sentence, the pronoun which refers to them must agree with the second person, in preference to the third, and with the first person in preference to both; as, "thou and thy brother are both in fault, and ye ought to confess it: the master and I quarrelled, and we were both to blame."

RULE XII. Conjunctions copulate similar cases, and the same mode and time of verbs; as, "I visited him this morning, and he was very well; he reads much, and digests what he reads."

OBSERVATIONS.

1. The conjunction that is often elliptically omitted; as, "see thou tell no one;" and when it expresses the end or motive, it governs the conjunctive mode of the verb.
2. The conjunctions, though, unless, if, except, &c. as often as they imply doubt, govern the conjunctive mode.

RULE XIII. Prepositions always govern the objective case; as, "take it from her, and give it to him: I gave it to William, that is, to him."

OBSERVATIONS.

1. Nouns of place have always the preposition to before them, with verbs and participles of motion; as, "I went to Paris; I am going to town;" but the preposition at is used with verbs neuter, and the substantive verb to be; as, "I have been at Paris;" he lives at Portsmouth; he arrived at Lincoln, and on his road touched at —"
2. But we use the preposition in before countries, cities, and even large towns, when speaking of those in the same nation; as, "he lives in France, he resides in London;"—and at before villages, single houses, and cities, provided they are in distant countries; as, "he lives at Highgate; he resides at Vienna."

OBSERVATIONS RESPECTING ADVERBS.

1. If the following adverbs (none of which have any government in the English language), when, while, after, &c. are suppressed in a sentence, and if the phrase be formed with the participle, independent of the rest of the sentence, it is called the case absolute; as, "Jesus entering, said unto them, that is, when Jesus entered he said unto them, &c."
2. Two negatives destroy each other, and are equal to an affirmative; as, "I will not give none," is as much as to say, "I will give some."
